DEAN GOYAN

In February of this year Dr. Goyan of the School of Pharmacy was appointed as Acting Dean of Students at the Medical Center. This is a part-time position and Dr. Goyan spends the rest of his time as professor of physical, analytical and pharmaceutical chemistry in the School of Pharmacy.

FRANK M. GOYAN, Ph.D.

Dr. Goyan was born in Placerville, California, in 1908. He attended school there until 1926 when he entered the University of California at Berkeley. In 1931 he obtained his masters degree in chemistry and the same year he began teaching here at the Medical Center while continuing his graduate studies at Berkeley. In 1937 he received his Ph.D. from the U.C. Berkeley College of Chemistry and began a full-time position here in the College of Pharmacy, which has since been accredited as the School of Pharmacy. Dr. Goyan has remained on the faculty of this campus since then except for the years of World War II when he participated in research on thermo-electric problems related to thermo-electric dynamics or the thermo-electric determination of molecular weights.

Dr. Goyan has always maintained a great deal of respect for students and enjoys the company of students.

"I have always tried to feel that they were my friends and at times I have had close friendships among them."

A former student of Dr. Goyan arranged with his home university, the University of Baghdad to have Dr. Goyan invited as a visiting professor in the School of Pharmacy there in 1961. This gave Dr. Goyan the opportunity to visit many other countries including Japan and Switzerland where he met many of his former students. "I have never felt it was work to help students and talk with them."

As for Dr. Goyan's role as Dean of Students, his office is responsible for all student activities except that classified as professional or academic.

"On this campus the custom of discipline is regarded as a professional matter affecting the professional competence of students in the different professions rather than a general matter of civic conduct. However, the Dean of Students may and often does intervene in minor matters brought to his attention by complaining neighbors or others without referring them to the individual schools. Any serious matter deserving discipline is referred to the individual schools. The principle function of the Dean's office is to help students in any way possible. Much of the time of the clerical force is spent in processing loans and scholarships. There is a rather complete service under Dr. Rodwell, Assistant Dean in charge of helping foreign students in every way possible. Dr. Ware is Assistant Dean in charge of scholarships and loans. As Acting Dean, I am in charge of keeping things on an even keel, avoiding misunderstanding and hardship as a result of any action coming from the office of Dean of Students. Regardless of my position as Dean, I have always tried to convince other members of faculties that students are people, not a race set apart — and to students, that faculty are people. That is a reasonable objective of mine, regardless of whether I'm Dean or not. Another objective is to aid in relations between students and faculty always on the basis of mutual respect, never on the basis of formality or sense of duty."

Dr. Goyan is presently head of a student's food committee, ratified by the Board of Governors as a permanent committee perpetuated by appointments made by the committee. The purpose of this committee is to communicate the wishes of students in regard to food service directly to the persons responsible, to offer constructive criticism, and to use creativity in developing the food service for students.

"It has just gotten started, but the meetings have been interesting and we seem to be getting results."

Dr. Goyan would like to remind students of the loan and scholarship function of his office, to encourage students to utilize this service if needed, and to assure them that an emergency loan fund is available so that no student need fear the embarrassment of being completely out of funds. "Providing that he can appeal to the office 24 hours before he is completely out of money." This particular loan must be paid back within three months. Also, there is printed material available in the Dean's Office concerning the various loans and scholarships available.

Dr. Goyan has long been well-known for his genuine concern and interest in students as well as for his success in academic endeavors. He is therefore a very appropriate choice for this position and will undoubtedly be most successful with, and appreciated by, the students, faculty, and administration of this campus.

SKID ROW MISSION CLINIC

Perhaps many of you on the campus have seen the Christian Fellowship meeting posters and have wondered what kind of religious organization it is and exactly what it does in its weekly functions. Spiritual insight into one's self and life is certainly a principal objective. Many and varied Christian Fellowship activities emphasize this theme. This article serves to inform you of just one of these activities which is particularly pertinent to the Medical Center and its concept of comprehensive patient care.

For over one year the Christian Fellowship has been operating a Skid Row medical clinic at the Life Line Mission, Fourth and Minna Streets, in downtown San Francisco. The clinic has catered to over 1,190 patients. Literally thousands of pills and other appropriate medications were dispensed. Many cases have been referred to various hospitals in the immediate area. Through a special arrangement, some are even admitted to UCMC hospital and clinic program as significant and interesting teaching cases. Physical examinations have been given to many men and women who otherwise would never have had them.

The clinic is headed by Dr. Kahn Uyeyama, associate professor of internal medicine at the University of California Medical Center. A rotating staff of local doctors act as consultants for the medical students who perform the examinations. At present there are fifty students from the UC Medical Center who rotate each Monday through the clinic. The actual examining is done by senior and junior medical students but the sophomores and freshman are included as observers. Needless to say, this patient contact is especially advantageous as it allows them to learn a great deal by applying academic knowledge to direct clinical experience. The same method of instruction is employed with graduate nurses teaching students. The pharmacy is well stocked and run by the pharmacy students under the supervision of a registered pharmacist. The new dental division of the clinic is also progressing in a similar manner. Students from the paramedical fields of the University carry out the paper work that is necessarily involved. All those who participate in the operation of this notable establishment derive a sense of satisfaction as well as educational achievement. To be personally acquainted with a major problem of San Francisco and to be an integral part of constructive efforts towards its solution is certainly an enriching and rewarding experience.

Recently, we have moved into permanent facilities which include seven examination rooms, a laboratory, pharmacy, and bathroom. We hope to obtain two dental chairs, x-ray equipment, and instruments for more definitive dental work. With our present facilities, we can provide basic medical care to men and women of skid row and can help screen these people for evidence of more serious disease which requires hospitalization. As we initiated the project with the belief that Christianity has much to offer these people, we also attempt to give simple Christian advice. In the year just completed we hold that our assumptions about the need for such a Christian clinic in the area have proved correct. We anticipate greater service demands in the future and look forward to the continued growth of the clinic as an integral part of the public health rehabilitation efforts in San Francisco.

Anyone desiring additional information about the clinic or who would care to see it in operation can contact John Schmaelzle (4th year medical student) or Mike Sugawara (3rd year medical student). Your interest would be more than appreciated.

Christian Fellowship is more than theoretical discussion. It is active Christianity.

USED BOOKS

Beginning this week a new service is being offered to students - a central file for the listing of used textbooks for sale. The file will be kept at the Central Desk of Millberry Union. Anyone wanting to sell a textbook should fill out a card inside the box (complete information, please) and file it behind the author's last name (see instructions in file). Those wishing to buy a book may refer to these cards to get information on contacting the seller. The card file will be kept current by the removal of the card by the seller after the sale is made and the yearly removal of all old cards.

This service is being sponsored by the ASUMC Council in order to better serve students who are now attempting the same thing on an individual basis.

SYNAPSE PERSONALITY

Sue Emerson, a graduating dental hygienist, has been appropriately selected as one of the most outstanding students in her school. She is notable for her academic achievements and shines as a popular personality. As a young girl her family moved around California, finally ending up in Lafayette where they reside at present. Sue has a twin sister who is graduating from the University of California at Davis this year, and a younger brother who is in the Navy.

Sue first attended Diablo Valley Junior College where she originally majored in the biological sciences. Her indefinite goal at that time was teaching since she particularly desired a vocation that included contact with people. However, her objective changed when friends aroused her interest in dental hygiene. She applied for admittance in the University dental hygiene program and was readily accepted. On June 1 she will graduate from this campus, receiving a Bachelor of Science Degree in Dentistry.

Her post-graduate plans are to work for a year in the clinical area and then either join the Peace Corps or study for her Masters Degree in teaching. She views her education to date merely as a basic foundation on which she can realize her future aspirations.

In reference to dental hygiene, Sue responded with an intense liking for her profession. She loves people and enjoys working with children in particular. She believes that dental hygiene plays a significant roll in dentistry, especially with the increased demand for dental care. She states that it is a new and rapidly changing field with considerable potential. Women, and hopefully men, attending four year schools must take the responsible leadership in promoting and defining the profession. Qualified instructors are greatly needed in dental hygiene.

Sue's hobbies include reading, international correspondence, and music. She expresses much enthusiasm for San Francisco as it provides the opportunity to expand one's knowledge in music appreciation, theater entertainment, and other creative arts.

Sue is attractive, vivacious, and fun loving. These attributes combined with her intelligence, sincerity, and conscientious performance indicate a true credit to her chosen profession.

Herman Mattern, of 1254 - 42nd Avenue, San Francisco, received the International College of Dentists award for exceptional academic and professional development during the four years of dental school.

Dr. Howard M. Myers was named by the dental graduating class as its "most helpful" faculty member. Dr. Myers is associate professor of oral medicine and assistant dean of the School of Dentistry.

THE UNIVERSITY AND AN EDUCATION

Editor's Note: The following is being reprinted from the May 10 edition of the Michigan Daily. The Daily Californian reprinted this editorial in its May 24 edition. The Synapse seconds the Daily Californian in that while we do not necessarily agree with the sentiments expressed, we do feel that they are relevant to the University and the American College System in general.

Sometimes the most important things that have to be said are the most difficult to express.

When students try to explain just why they are disappointed, with their education at the University, they find it very hard to advance concrete reasons which can be readily understood by administrators and faculty members

The dissatisfaction remains — driven underground or covered up, perhaps, but it is still there. Despite being swatted down on specifics and despite the outward signs of vigor and achievement on the campus, the dissatisfaction remains. It is a feeling, rather than a thesis — deep-rooted suspicion, rather than ordered and explainable fact.

It is about time that the University really tried to understand why some students feel that it is not doing the best job it could

Can all of us really be content with our education? Can we really say that the academic experience is one to which we look forward and enjoy, instead of being something that must be routinely passed through and endured?

There are too many students who couldn't care less about their classes. They leave the University with a mere sheepskin and no values supporting it. Ideals of education are held shallowly, and given lip service but little real commitment.

Much of this is the students' own fault. The freshman who asks his instructor in class whether Tibet is north or south of Manchuria, the coed who thinks honorary initiations on the Diag are "cute," the graduate student who doesn't know who the dean of the graduate school is, the student who noisily closes his notebook at the hour, whether the lecture is over with or not — all contribute to the images of the "average student" as a lethargic, humdrum fellow undeserving of anything more than recognition of his enrollment at the University.

Steps toward improving the situation lie, I think, not in any specific policy alternations but in changing a pervasive campus mood that does not recognize this vague but latent dissatisfaction as a problem.

In terms of influencing students, professors probably have the most potential

Too often, however, the professor himself is an unstimulating, routine conductor of the classroom, doing his job, keeping a bare minimum of office hours and not trying particularly hard to do anything extra.

If professors continually strived to be themselves rather than play a role, if subject matters were delivered with warmth, feeling and sensitivity, then we might be getting somewhere

The University has a regrettable tendency to use its great attributes as a crutch to cover up or explain away its faults. What's wrong with you, it asks the questioning student; how can you complain when such a wonderful faculty and blue-chip group of student peers are on hand?

The answer, of course, goes back to the intangibles, to the nagging notion that something is lacking in our education, that no matter how often we are informed of the greatness of the University that something is wrong with it and not us. You can't convince someone to like beer, and there are limits to persuading students that yes they really are getting the best education possible when they sincerely believe otherwise.

For the good of everyone concerned, something has got to be done. I do not know how one goes about encouraging professors to instill more warmth and even emotion into their instruction; I do not know what can be done to change an attitude or a tone, aside from a wholesale reshuffling of personnel.

But the outward atmosphere of complacency somehow must be attacked and understood if the University is to be honest in describing itself as a great educational facility.

A YEAR OF CALIFORNIA CLUB

California Club is an organization which was founded by then President Robert Gordon Sproul. The group endeavors to promote intracampus unity and serves as a student advisory group to the President of the University. The President appoints twenty members from each of the University campuses.

The activities of the past year have been guided by Chapter Chairman Lida Chase and faculty advisor Dr. Jerome Motto. Vice-president Liz Hutchinson has been known chiefly by her handwriting if nothing else; she has sent just hundreds of notices reminding members of meetings. Linda Thurman has had the enviable (?) position of keeper of the funds.

Orientation of students new to the Medical Center campus is one of the most formidable undertakings of the year; it includes the program of welcome addresses given in the Medical Sciences Auditorium followed by tours of the campus. Work on the orientation for next September has already begun under the direction of George LaVaque. The group also assisted in welcoming the foreign scholars at a tea given in October sponsored by the Committee on Foreign Scholars.

Med Center members enjoyed the All University Weekend in Berkeley this past fall; included in the weekend were the Cal Club luncheon and the reception given by President and Mrs. Kerr in their home.

To ward off pre-final gloom Allan Izumi arranged for a banquet in Chinatown last fall; everyone tried their hand in the use of chopsticks and their voice in singing "Young Clark Kerr."

Without a doubt the most impressive function this year was the Cal Club Convention held on the Santa Barbara campus during semester break. Jerry Jorgensen, Chris Lease, and Bob Barcklay were among the skit participants who portrayed the confused wanderings of a medical center visitor (victim?). For some dark reason the San Francisco Chapter was awarded the "Too Drunk to Cheat Award."

In April Marsha Lofea and Ellen Fong braved the stormy elements to drive the Med Center display to the Davis Picnic Day. Jody Gompertz was responsible for assembling the display, while Sam Kidder and Lida Chase helped to share some of the associated anxieties.

Bob Cooper has been sending the local news to the Cal Club Newsletter editor, so a few on the outside world should know about the existence of the Medical Center.

There have been other efforts undertaken by the chapter; one is the financial support of the Dean Herbert Johnstone Emergency Loan Fund. Gay Blackford prepared some smashing publicity for the recent benefit cake sale, and fifty dollars was added to the fund.

Then, as requested by President Kerr, the three-term calendar and the responsibilities of the campus press were discussed; discussion summaries were then sent to the President.
